Course Overview

The Residency-in-Practice course includes both a field experience and a class component. The class component is an integral part of the work for which you earn academic credit.

As your faculty supervisor, I will review your weekly journals and meet with you periodically as a group and individually to discuss your field experience and issues related to legal practice. I will also communicate with your field supervisor about your progress in the field placement.

As a Resident, you are stepping into the role of a lawyer-in-training and a professional in the workplace. To earn academic credit for work in a law or judicial office, in accordance with ABA Standards, you must participate in substantial lawyering experiences, receive feedback from your field and faculty supervisors, reflect on your experiences throughout the placement, and engage in self-assessment. The Residency-in-Practice course is designed to meet these requirements.

As a legal professional, you are bound by the Rules of Professional Conduct for lawyers in your jurisdiction, as well as other rules, guidelines, or policies applicable to your particular field placement. You are expected to resolve any workplace issues and problems with the attorney or others involved. If you cannot resolve the issue at the workplace, you should discuss it with me. If necessary, we will involve the Director of Residencies, Professor Cindy Adcock.

The Student Handbook (available on TWEN) has further information about the Residency-in-Practice. You should review this before the start of the course.

Learning Goals

The Residency-in-Practice course is intended to advance these learning goals:

- Transferring knowledge from study to practice, applying legal doctrines learned in class to a practice setting, and bringing knowledge and skills developed in practice back to the classroom;
- Deepening knowledge of the legal profession and lawyers' professional responsibilities, and enhancing professional development; and
- Increasing the ability to learn from experience, through regular feedback from attorneys, self-evaluation, and reflection on the lessons of practice under faculty guidance.

Each student will also identify individual goals and develop a plan for attaining these goals in the residency.

Course Materials

The required reading includes three chapters from Leah Wortham, et al, Learning from Practice: A Text for Experiential Legal Education (3d ed.) (West Academic 2016).¹

Policies

Grading

This course will be graded on a pass/fail basis. The minimum requirements for a passing grade are as follows:

- Completion of required number of hours.
- Timely submission of all assignments, including weekly journals and time logs.
- Professionalism in dealing with your field supervisor, faculty supervisor, clients, and others with whom you interact during the residency.

Exemplary performance in your field placement and the class component may earn results in an Honors grade. Failure to meet standards will result in a Low Pass or a Failing grade, depending on the extent of deficiency.

Assignments & Deadlines

Your work for this course includes weekly journal entries and time logs. Journal prompts and a time log form will be available on TWEN. The Student Handbook has further instructions for completing your journal entries and time logs.

¹You can purchase the individual chapters from the publisher, using the links provided. It is not necessary to purchase the complete book.

Additional assignments include readings from the Learning from Practice text, preparation of a Learning Goals & Plan memo, mid-term and final self-assessments, and submission of required forms.

You will also participate in two group meetings and two individual conferences with me. Students working away from Greensboro may participate in the group meetings and individual conferences remotely (by phone or other means to be arranged).

The Schedule & Deadlines section below indicates due dates for journal entries, time logs, and other assignments, and dates for the two group meetings. Individual conferences will be scheduled during the term. You should enter all assignment deadlines and meeting dates in your calendar, just as you would for appointments and deadlines in legal practice.

You must submit all journal entries, time logs, and other assignments by uploading them to TWEN no later than 11:59 pm on the applicable due date. You should also send copies to me by email. If you encounter difficulties with TWEN, your submission will still be timely as long as you send the email copy before the deadline. Be sure to upload the submission to TWEN once you have resolved the problem.

If you are unable to meet a deadline because of your field supervisor's schedule, you should notify me to receive an extension. Extensions will generally not be granted for other reasons absent extraordinary circumstances.

Attendance

Elon Law School has adopted the following attendance policy for all courses:

The Law School administers a policy that a student maintain regular and punctual class attendance in all courses in which the student is registered, including externships, clinical courses, or simulation courses. Faculty members will give students written notice of their attendance policies before or during the first week of class. These policies may include, but are not limited to: treating late arrivals, early departures, and/or lack of preparation as absences; imposing grade or point reductions for absences, including assigning a failing grade or involuntarily withdrawing a student from the class; and any other policies that a professor deems appropriate to create a rigorous and professional classroom environment.

In case of illness or emergency, students may contact the Office of Student and Professional Life, which will then notify the student's instructors. A student may notify the faculty member directly of a planned absence and should refer to individual faculty members regarding any policy that may apply. In the case of prolonged illness or incapacity, the student should contact the Office of Student and Professional Life.

Honor Code

The Law School honor code² applies to all activities related to your law school study, including conduct during class and in residency field placements.
